ORIGIN

VANCOUVER (BRITISH COLUMBIA, CANADA)

Arc'teryx is situated at the foot of the Coast Mountains in Vancouver, BC. This is an area renowned for rugged mountains, glacier ice caps and temperate rain forests, creating the ultimate location for outdoor product design and testing. Arc'teryx has become the leader in high performance outdoor equipment, known for ground breaking innovations in climbing, skiing and alpine technologies.

Beginning with the World's first 3-D harnesses in 1991, Arc'teryx then developed the first thermoformed backpacks in 1995 followed by industry changing apparel designs in 1998. Today, Arc'teryx continues forward with its single-minded approach of designing the lightest, best performing and highest quality products.

Technological revolutions developed by Arc'teryx have lead the Outdoor industry. Among the design and technology breakthroughs now considered industry standards are WaterTight™ zippers, micro seam technology, radically reduced garment weights, laminated components, Tri-Dex™ gloves and Warp Strength Technology® harnesses.

The Arc'teryx ethos is to continually challenge what exists and develop the tools needed to manufacture new ideas. Designers who live to play in the outdoors drive the core development cycle, along with Vancouver-based manufacturing facilities and collaborative partnerships with textile companies. After more than twenty years of innovation, passion and the quest for performance, Arc'teryx continues to fuel the drive to push the boundaries of what is known. At its heart, Arc'teryx is not a climbing company, or a skiing company or even an outdoor company—it's an innovation company.
